Teacher: The Hero of Our Everyday Lives

by Jerome M. Javier, Grade VII, RCSHS

Do you know the reason why there are doctors, nurses, engineers, chefs, and many other occupations? It is just because of our dear teachers. Now let us not just love them only during teachers’ day or month but we should let them feel that we love them everyday. We spend almost half of the day in our school, and for that they will serve as our second parents. But sometimes we consider them as our own friend. But we should still show respect to them just like what we do to our parents.

Sometimes they exceed from being a teacher. Sometimes they become our parents because they always want to see the best from us. Sometimes they become our friend who makes us happy always and they are also an adviser who give us advises whenever we have problems in our school-life and even in our personal lives. They became our supporter, provider, and they are also our number one fan in every activities that we are joining, including our parents also as if we are celebrities. They always compliment us and they always mold our character and help us improve our talents. They always help us emotionally, physically, and mentally. When we first step in our school, we are really shy and don’t know what to do. But they built our confidence and they guided us in our education.

Speaking of guidance, I compare them to a candle. Their light guide us to our success in the future. They are willing to sacrifice their wax for us. In them, I learned the concept of how to be patient, considerate, kind, understanding, and how to love the unlovable. I would also want to say thank you to all the teachers out there for doing a big part in the lives of students. And there I can say that teachers are the heroes of our everyday lives. And they deserve the kind of respect just like what the twelve disciples of Jesus did to Him as a teacher.

Teachers are like candles who are willing to sacrifice themselves just to five light to others.
